OPERA AND A BURLESQUE CIRCUS ONSIDERABLE talent was shown

EL PASO AMATEURS PUT ON COMIC

by El Paso amateurs in the performunce of 'The Chimes of Normandy" at the El Paso theater Priday night. The first floor of the house was well filled and the audience laughed with and applauded the amateurs' efforts with genuine delight.

H. M. Heyman, perhaps, took first honors with his monolog between acts. He gave some clever imitations and not off some local hits, including a statement that George Washington as a boy was very ambitious—"Just like Teddy Roosevelt and James A. Dick." His line of talk was exceedingly clever for an amateur.

for an amateur.

In the cast, Miss Beulah Brown in the role of Serpolette, "the good for nothing," made a big hit, and her acting, as well as her singing, charmed the audience. She shows talent and if she can develop her voice she has much promise for a stage career, if she should

Miss Chrysa Hogarth, as Germaine

Miss Chrysa Hogarth, as Germaine, the lost marchioness, sang in very swaet, missical tones and was perfect in her lines. She exhibited all the dignity that was required of her position, just as Miss Brown acted her role with the abandon of a spoiled little walf whose sudden good fortune for a time had turned her head.

Charles Armstrong, as the magistrate, furnished the comedy in his usual capable manner, and Roy Jones also gave the audience a number of laughs, in the role of the notary. One of Armstrong's local jokes referred to the recent municipal election. He was found under the table, apparently looking for something, and explained that he was hunting "for the remnants of the Citizens' ticket."

Chas. A. Dailey acquitted himself with much credit as Gaspard, the miser. His work drew much applause from the audience, especially in the "hamnted" castle scene in the second act, where he goes to gloat over his gold and perform his nightly mission of frightening the people of the village away from his treasures.

Chas. Rokahr was not well up in his lines, but he had only a short time for rehearsal and study. He acted the role of Henri, marguis of Corneville. He did not sing in the scheduled duet with.
Miss Hogaria in the last act, but Miss

Mrs. Edwin Bowles made a hit when she sang "My Fretty Persian Rose" in the last act. She has a good volce and ease and grace of manner.

Miss Reba Elliott won several encores in the first act, singing "My Southern Hose." Her pretty face, extremely natural manner of acting and supparent ease before the audience made her friends from the very beginning.

Miss Brown and "Duke" Wehlken did a very dainty little dance in the last and forced them to respond to an encore.
